Black History Month

This month of history is so important. We have been the most diverse nation for the longest time, and we have made great contributions to our country's progress. We are proud of our diverse people who have made history change in the world through an incredible amount of courage and hard work.

Let's honor the month by remembering the people who have inspired our country by celebrating diversity.

Let's start by recognizing the civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on February 15th!

More activities and events will be coming soon!

March Madness, which is held from the end of January to the beginning of April, is a series of single-elimination basketball games played between 68 teams.

Black History Month events are being held at the same time every year.
