II. Resource Development

A. Review Fundraising Strategy

Claudia and Michael review development plan. Strategy moving forward will emphasize cultivating personal relationships with individuals who have a capacity to support. This will include private individuals, foundations/corporations staff, Equitas stakeholders (parents, vendors, staff, local community and business leaders).

Michael then discussed the importance of building a long-term development pipeline and growing development into a support structure benefitting Equitas. This will include:

1. Building and refining the donor database, eTapestry, into a CRM that best supports Equitas' long-term development goals.
2. A portfolio will be created to allow for focus on a specific number of potential funders. The portfolio will ideally hold 120-150 prospects, which will contain interested private individuals, foundations, corporations, community leaders, general charter school supporters. This portfolio will reflect the top donors and prospects and will be fluid over time. Prospects will be added to and removed from the portfolio as new prospects are qualified or disqualified as possible funders.
3. Implementing a "Culture of Philanthropy." This will involve launching campaigns encouraging all Equitas stakeholders - faculty, staff, board members, parents - to philanthropically support Equitas. Michael talked about the power that tracking the success of these campaigns can have when soliciting major gifts.

Claudia then suggested intimate, targeted fundraising events. Big, community-wide events, like Galas, are far away in the future, but it will be critical to have appropriately sized events that will lead into bigger fundraising events and campaigns. Claudia suggested "Poker Nights" and intimate dinners at restaurants.

Michael and Claudia then discussed the upcoming 10th Anniversary in 2019 for Equitas opening. This presents a great opportunity for development and campaigns. Moving forward, some time should be dedicated to strategize what can and should be accomplished with this opportunity.
