IV. Virtual Learning Update and Data Deep Dive

A. Virtual Learning Update and Data Deep Dive

Sonya Pratt, Chief of School, began the discussion with highlighting trends in the Quarter 1 data from City on a Hill. She shared grade level data at a glance from both Q1 Progress Reports as well as Q1 Final Grades (report cards), and noted that while passing rates have risen since progress reports, achievement is far off from goals. Pratt noted that trends, such as barriers to virtual community engagement and younger teachers adjusting to remote teaching while starting their career, as factors in these results.

Pratt shared that City on a Hill is tracking attendance closely in Quarter 2 to examine the correlation between attendance and academic achievement. School leadership's plan to address low engagement, including implementing additional culture building meetings and shifts to class schedule to adjust to the realities of interacting through technology, and forming a Pandemic problem-solving school leader group.

The Board discussed if there were other indicators, such as make up work, outside of attendance that were affecting academic performance. Pratt shared that COAH extended Quarter 1 and allowed students to make up work during that time period, which attributed to the increase in final grades compared to Progress Report grades.

Pratt shared that family communication has been made a priority this school year, with families receiving a biweekly email with school updates and having the opportunity to attend a monthly Family Council meeting.

The Board asked what training was in place for novice teachers to improve their practice. Pratt shared that COAH has regular new teacher professional development sessions in place, sharing out best practices, and a teacher mentoring program.

The discussion concluded with Pratt sharing that after receiving Quarter 2 Progress Report data next week, City on a Hill will have more information to formulate a plan for moving forward in the academic year.
