III. Committee Business: Discussion Items

A. Current Financial Position Overview

Prasanth from Charter Impact presented a financial overview as of March, noting that while DCA and BJE are maintaining healthy fund balances and near-budget performance, other schools such as JHHS, RCA, and OCA are projecting single-year losses, backed by a position of strong reserves.

Looking ahead to the 2026-2027 preliminary budget draft, he projected growth or stable surpluses for DCA, BJE, and JHHS, though RCA faces projected losses in its out-years due to abnormally high facility depreciation expenses. Finally, he shared news of a potential state funding boost, including a higher COLA and a significant increase in special education funding per ADA, which is not yet factored into the current models.

Committee member Liz raised concerns regarding late special education vendor invoices from the prior year and noted missing variance to second interim columns in the financial reports for DCA and JHHS. Additionally, she highlighted a network wide issue with ADA losses, questioning whether the budget should proactively forecast lower attendance or implement a plan to improve student attendance rates.

Prasanth explained that they currently use historical trends and a rolling average to create conservative forecasts, which prevents temporary, one year spikes from skewing the data too much. However, moving forward, his team plans to specifically study the drop off trends that occur between the first and second interim reports. This adjustment will allow them to build a more holistic projection method for future budgets.

Committee member Liz pointed out a discrepancy in the DCA forecast where projected federal special education revenue decreased from $44,000 to $36,000 compared to the second interim, yet SPED expenses increased.

Prasanth explained that while federal special education revenue is lower than the second interim, it is being offset by higher state revenue, keeping the combined total close to the year start projection without an expected reduction. He noted that revenue is tied to per-ADA/enrollment funding formulas, whereas expenses are driven independently by actual student needs, which can occasionally cause the two figures to vary disproportionately.

Committee Chair Davis calculated that excluding OCA's large $456,000 deficit leaves a combined deficit of around $270,000 across the remaining network sites, he asked if the shortfall is projected to decrease or be entirely eliminated in the upcoming fiscal year.

Prasanth explained that leadership is actively designing future financial models that eliminate deficits for the upcoming and subsequent years. He added that their outlook is further improved by newly released data projecting a higher COLA and increased state funding.

Adrienne, CEO, clarified that BJE is projected to at least break even, while the other two schools are expected to either financially rebound or undergo budget adjustments in the upcoming year.

B. 2026-27 Budget Preview

Prasanth introduced the preliminary budget for RCA, which projects an enrollment of 330 students with a 93% attendance rate, with a goal for the school to break even with a healthy fund balance for the 2026-2027 fiscal year. However, he noted that this model excludes the newly released May revision data and highlights potential financial concerns for the school in the subsequent years, where deficits are currently projected for 2027-2028 and 2028-2029.

Adrienne, CEO recommended against approving the current RCA budget as-is due to projected out-year losses, stating that the school actually maintains a healthy operational surplus if depreciation expense is removed. To support the school's recovery and prioritize student needs, she proposed consulting with an auditor on financial solutions, such as subsidizing depreciation, reducing management fees, or forgiving portions of the outstanding loan, and plans to present a revised plan to the board next month.

Committee Chair Davis mentioned RCA's financial figures indicate an unusually high facility cost, he asked to benchmark the total facility and depreciation numbers of other school locations as a percentage of their overall expenses for a clearer comparison.

Prasanth projected an enrollment of 340 students with a 92.5% attendance rate for JHHS, leading to expected budget surpluses and a growing 30% fund balance for both the upcoming year and the out-years. Prasanth explained that the standard COLA in the new May revision is 2.87%. However, he highlighted that there is an additional provision for a Super COLA which, if passed as proposed by the state, would increase that funding rate closer to 4.31%. Prasanth projected a stable budget for BJE with an enrollment of 475, a $103,530 surplus that is slated to grow across three years, a healthy 36.6% fund balance, and a strong ending cash position. Similarly, DCA is forecasting balanced growth with 386 students, an initial $146,000 surplus rising to $288,000 in subsequent years, and a strong ending cash position alongside a robust 68.6% fund balance.
