Literacy Quality Review (LQR) Overview

A Lit Quality Review (LQR) is an evidence-based process focused on gathering data on your system's current reading ecosystem's design, implementation, and impact. Its findings are not standalone assessments of school performance. Instead, they inform decision-making, offer formative feedback, and aid in redesign and implementation at the school or system level. Beginning with an LQR allows potential partners and Lit to explore longer-term partnerships from an aligned starting point with clear areas of focus, goals, and timelines.

The Literacy Quality Review Process

During the Lit Quality Review planning phase, the assigned Lit point-person will conduct two 60-minute virtual meetings over Zoom with you. In these meetings, you will:

Define Your RAPID Team: Together, you will identify and establish your RAPID team, comprising critical stakeholders who will contribute input, make recommendations, and participate in decision-making processes throughout the Lit Quality Review and potential future collaboration with Lit.

Collect and Review Artifacts: Gather and review necessary artifacts and documents that provide context on your current reading ecosystem. These materials will be shared with Lit to facilitate a comprehensive understanding of your educational context.

Because reading is believing.

Create Visit Schedules: Collaboratively develop daily schedules for the site visit, ensuring adequate time for Lit to observe various aspects of your reading ecosystem, including classroom instruction, instructional coaching meetings, data analysis sessions, and professional learning opportunities.

Gain Insight into Your Community: Engage in discussions to learn more about your learning community, clarify key documents and artifacts, and finalize any outstanding scheduling and logistical details related to the visit.

Be introduced to READ: Introduce you to the Reading Ecosystem Alignment Diagnostic (READ), the assessment tool utilized by Lit to evaluate the alignment of your reading ecosystem with research and culturally responsive pedagogy principles.

During the Lit Quality Review visit, the Lit team will:

- Conduct Classroom Visits: Observations of curriculum implementation and instructional practices will be conducted both collaboratively with a member of your team and individually by Lit members. This approach allows for a comprehensive understanding of your school community through various perspectives.
- Observe Meetings and Professional Learning Sessions: The team will also observe instructional coaching meetings, data analysis meetings, Professional Learning Communities (PLCs), and other relevant professional learning activities.
- Interview Key Stakeholders: Interviews will be conducted with key stakeholders ranging from system-level leaders to teachers, allowing for insights into various perspectives within the school ecosystem.
- Provide High-Level Overview: After the visit, a high-level overview of findings and potential focus areas for growth will be provided to you and your RAPID team, offering valuable insights to guide future actions and improvements.

Lit Quality Review Synthesis: The Lit Quality Review team will undertake the following steps after the visit to synthesize their findings and provide recommendations:

- Finalize the READ (Reading Ecosystem Assessment and Diagnosis): The team will identify and highlight the current strengths and areas requiring prioritization within your reading ecosystem.
- Prepare a Comprehensive Written Report: They will document their findings and evidence gathered during the Lit Quality Review process in a detailed written report. This report will be aligned with the READ findings, providing a clear overview of the assessment outcomes.
- Provide Recommendations: Based on their assessment, the team will offer actionable recommendations for enhancing your reading ecosystem. These recommendations will be tailored to address identified areas for improvement and will be structured to guide enhancements over time, emphasizing phased implementation.

Lit Quality Review Debrief: Your RAPID team will meet with members of your Lit Lit Quality Review team in 1 90-minute virtual meeting over Zoom to:

- Reflect upon the findings from your Lit Quality Review report and learn where there is resonance and dig into further questions or concerns the report might raise
- Gain clarity on the phased recommendations for reading ecosystem improvement

Because reading is believing.

- Discuss potential future partnership with Lit

We structure our Lit Quality Review to be a gateway to continued and deeper partnership. After the Lit Quality Review, you, your team, and Lit will determine whether continued partnership is the best next step for all parties.

Partnership Agreement: If both parties are in alignment and want to move forward with a potential partnership that will support implementation recommendations from the Lit Quality Review, a point-person from Lit will work with you to develop a partnership agreement that is aligned with your phased plan.

Partnership Launch: We launch our partnership beginning with the first phase of reading ecosystem realignment as outlined in your Lit Quality Review report.

Lit Learning Journey

Throughout your learning journey Lit will work with the system's backbone literacy organization, a core group of leaders from the system that are responsible for the alignment and implementation of the research aligned reading ecosystem. This backbone organization should consist of the most senior level leader who has decision making rights over literacy programming and priority planning as well as network level leader(s) who are responsible for the implementation, monitoring, and coaching of others to implement all of the components of the reading ecosystem.

Staffing:

Lit will allocate the following staff:

- A Managing Partner to:
 - Supervise the yearlong priority plan and ensure improvement cycles drive towards annual goals and priorities set in collaboration with the client
 - Provide executive coaching to the decision-maker of the client's backbone organization
 - Manage the partnership, act as the primary contact for the system and foster partnership health

 - Coach members of the client's backbone organization on critical leadership levers, such as:
 - Data strategy and analysis
 - System- and building-level observation and feedback

Because reading is believing.

- Priority planning and monitoring
- Change management
- Professional learning

Note: depending on the size of the engagement, Lit may need to add additional Partners to the partnership to ensure that all coaching, planning, and data cycles are completed as per our final agreement.

Lit has designed an accelerated version of Lit’s Learn and Design Cohort model to align with Navigator Schools’ timeline for a science of reading aligned ELA curriculum selection and rollout. Through a combination of collaborative in-person and virtual coaching and support sessions, Lit will work with the Navigator system to:

- Identify and select a curriculum to pilot
