Additionally, students who are new to ELan for 2020 - 2021 are improving, exponentially, as they approach reading AT level, but we still have a long way to go.

A significant number of students did not do well on LEAP prep testing. The belief is they are making many adjustments from virtual to in building testing, and from the regiment of focus required for testing.

IV. Academic

A. Academic Committee Report – Anane Olatunji (Voting)

We welcomed a new member, Mr. Steven T. Brown, and provided him with a brief overview of the committee's job description. He is eager to work with the committee and we look forward to his participation.

The inquiry that Dr. Olatunji initiated with NOLA-PS in January has been concluded. As the committee has been exploring how school data might be used to improve the board's oversight of Élan Academy, Dr. Olatunji reached out to see if NOLA-PS, as our authorizer, might be of assistance. After considering the inquiry, the office of school support and improvement, headed by Dr. Kelli Jordan, recommended that we seek assistance from our head of school in order to learn more about student assessments. Consequently, the description of assessments provided previously to us by school staff is attached to this report. We encourage all board members to familiarize themselves with this information.

The focus of this month's meeting had to do with the same data collection project referenced above. The committee chair stated that we are now in a position to review school data more holistically, given that it has been collected for at least the past three months. The discussion that ensued, however, suggests that there may still be some confusion within the board about the purpose and potential value of this project. Therefore, the remainder of this report restates and elaborates on key points from previous committee reports this academic year.

1. During the board retreat last July, the trainer and facilitator, Erline Hertilien (BES.org), indicated that our board should be monitoring school/student data to ensure that stakeholder concerns about diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) might be met. (See attachments for a copy of the initial draft of the action plan.)
2. Consequently, in August the committee began working with the head of school and her staff to devise such a plan. The two parties (board and staff) agreed upon collecting new data points to supplement those already monitored by the board. Page 2 of 9 709 Park Blvd., New Orleans, LA 70114; (504) 619-9720; www.elanacademy.org
3. As a logical starting point, the parties agreed to collect data that centered around the demographic groups used in state systems of educational accountability, including Louisiana. Other points deemed as relevant by the committee and as feasible by staff were included. Importantly, these points included student assessment as well as non-assessment data. (See attachments for a copy of the minutes from the committee meeting of 09/22/20.)
4. With no previous roadmap to follow, the committee chair stressed that this project should be viewed as a work in progress, subject to change, if needed. Accordingly, throughout the fall, the chair expressed concern about the feasibility of the effort, given the limitations of the school's current database(s), as explained by staff, and the nature of the new data points. The head of school was helpful in providing data despite this concern.
5. At the regular board meeting last December, the chair shared some preliminary findings from the project. He also reiterated his contention made at the beginning of the school year that, aside from improving the board's responsibility of monitoring school performance, this effort could potentially provide new opportunities to market the school.

For example, as a point of reference, Dr. Olatunji shared national data on student achievement, highlighting gaps between subgroups. Unless we monitor data, we will not know whether Élan Academy has similar gaps. If it does not, then that information could benefit our efforts to market the school. However, if it does, then we could decide whether or how to address the situation.

The presentation ended with an emphasis of caution, however, when interpreting the preliminary findings. The chair stressed further the importance of examining findings overtime before forming any conclusions. (For more information, see the report of 12/16/20.)

Over the course of this spring term, therefore, the committee looks forward to sharing with the board more results from the school data collection project. To the extent that the results reflect trends over time, rather than individual snap shots as in last December, the data may become more useful to the board in fulfilling its role of monitoring student achievement in particular and school performance in general.
