IV. Executive & Governance Committee

A. Discussion Item: Committee Report

The Board briefly organized who's bringing dinner through the end of 2023. Greg shared about a process for moving from being a professionally functioning school board to being an effective professional functioning school board, and one that is greatly focused on the outcomes of students. This is not about reimagining the school, or its processes, pedagogies, but instead about helping the Board be clear in its role, and then if there are changes that cascade down, then those are very likely to do so because they are desired at other levels of the organization. Getting started includes more time reading some resources, including learning the language of the Effective School Board (ESB) framework, including what's the work of the board and what's the work of the Head of School. The board then listens to community and (re)codifies the vision and values. From there, a few student outcomes goals are prioritized, along with guardrails that protect the community's values. Then interim goals and interim guardrails are created, along with an adopted calendar for when progress will be monitored throughout the year during public board meetings. Effective school boards spend at least 50% of their public meeting time monitoring the goals and guardrails. As part of this, most effective boards go through both policy diet and committee diet processes, and use a General Consent Report even more. The Board discussed shrinking Finance Committee report outs at future Board meetings and leveraging the General Consent Report more.

Sarah asked what it looks like, and Greg shared about the board receiving outcome data reports (per an adopted calendar) and then engaging in questions about the report and hearing more from Staff on their analysis of the data. Board members shall refrain from offering advice or suggestions on what staff should do, and instead listen for staff's analysis and own plan moving forward and how it aligns to the goals and guardrails. Listening for the vision and values is a multi-pronged process, including starting with the current words, using survey information, asking students, families, and staff. Krishna shared that this sounded like a long process and what first steps might look like and Greg shared that he would offer additional readings for now and helping the Finance Committee diet. Krishna shared that it will be important to organize and plan communications from the school so that posts aren't lost and families aren't inundated.

Additionally, Greg shared about future Board Brown Act and Secretary training opportunities.

Greg shared a BoardOnTrack training with Board Candidate Amy.

Kara clarified that her FAC Board seat ends in October and is seeking a replacement and would consider general board membership, too.

Greg shared that dyslexia screening is now law in California, and OUSD's Superintendent shared enrollment information for OUSD which showed more students in their Student Information System (SIS) than their budget projects and also fewer students on their in-real-life Day 10 count than in their SIS. The Great School Choices blog has been posted lists of charter-run schools with spaces available -- schools all around the City are actively seeking additional enrollment. Greg asked and Krishna shared that the UMCS is currently enrolling more students than it did last year, per our enrollment plan, and bucking this overall enrollment trend. Greg shared that the D5 OUSD board election had an error in candidates qualifying for the ballot, but it was resolved, and that OUSD is seeking volunteers for its various oversight committees.
