E. Call to Public

Maribel Gonzalez, current math teacher at Vida, presented data showing student's progress in reading and math over the last year. Reading data results show marked improvement, while math data held steady. The data showed a general upward trend for all students and that student attrition accounted for the drop in student math performance. The current math team, under the leadership of Martha Davis, has devised multiple strategies for improving math scores for next year. Some initiatives include mapping high performance classrooms, focused interventions at math stations during class time, and after school math clinics to help struggling students. They also stressed the importance of helping our language learners learn the language of math and processes.

F. Executive Director's report

Ms. Davis presented the Director's report. She focused on strategies to improve student achievement. She noted that her team is striving to level students upon their arrival at Vida so that focused interventions can begin right away. She also reiterated several math intervention strategies in the works. She also discussed current strategies to improve the amount of time and frequency that Vida's students are exposed to Spanish language input. Victor Fonseca will be hosting several events in the coming weeks and months to help students and their families acquire more Spanish.
